

TAKE THAT! PLUS THAT AND THAT AND THAT.

Each year thousands of housewares professionals from around the world fill Chicago's cavernous McCormick Place Exposition Center, where the newest innovations in home products are on display. You can get a look at the hottest of these new items in the HGTV special International Home & Housewares Show 2005, premiering June 19 at 9pm.

The special features new products to make life easier, healthier or just more fun. For example, your sick toddler might rest a little easier if the cool mist humidifier in his room is shaped like his favorite animal. Pizza lovers can cook whole pies in minutes — with the crust just the way they like it — in a microwave with a special pizza drawer. A cook with extra thyme on her hands might relish a spice rack that includes a mini-computer full of recipes that can be cross-referenced by spices.

Some of these items will be in stores soon. Others may never get that far, but for a look at great ingenuity, join hosts Jeff Wilson and Michele Torres as they do the walking, to bring you the best of show. — EB
